

Assistance from the Department of Human Services

for investors in
Cherry Fund Limited (CFL)

Investors who receive pensions or allowances:

Based on advice from the Receivers the Department of Human Services (the Department) has revised the value of investments including debentures, for assessment of each customer's investment into Cherry Fund Limited (CFL). The Department is no longer deeming income for these investments.

The Department will now maintain a value of 55 cents in the dollar being the initial minimum likely return as advised on 7 December 2012.

This value will be maintained until either:

- McGrath Nichol advise the Department of likely reduced value of debentures; or
- Some or all of the debenture is sold or repaid.

If an investor elects to take up an offer of sale, this will be assessed to determine if it is a third party 'arms-length' market transaction.

The Department's income support customers will need to advise us, within 14 days, if their investment has been sold or repaid, and how other assets has changed as a consequence: For example, their bank account balance may have increased or they may have purchased another asset, or they may have used the monies obtained for other purposes, as in repaying a loan.
